By Michael Parks

Los Angeles Times Service PEKING - The Reagan admintration's intensive efforts to draw hina into a closer strategic partership with the United States apcar to have reached an impasse exause of ambiguous U.S. poliies on arms sales to Taiwan, ac-ording to informed Chinese ources and diplomats here. Chinese leaders, moreover, are eparted to be worried by the imlications of the Reagan adminis-ration's refusal to put its declared oal of closer relations with Peking head of its sentimental attachnent to Taiwan.

No Headway

Foreign Minister Huang Hua rewrited to the Chinese leadership ast week that his recent talks with President Reagan and Secretary of state Alexander M. Haig Jr. had nade na significant headway on he main bilateral issue, which is J.S. arms sales to Taiwan. Peking objects strongly to such sales and contends that China's relations with the United States cannot realy advance at present.

For meetings that the United states had billed as possibly pivot-al for the broadening of Chinese-U.S. relations, China saw not even the prospect of a breakthrough soon, according to informed Chinese sources' evaluation of the Washington talks and Mr. Huang's report to the leadership here. Asked if there had been any prog- is now seen as being at an impasse.

ress on the central issue, an official replied, "not an inch."

Although that was the result Peking had concluded in advance, Chinese officials were disappointed that Premier Zhao Ziyang had failed to get Mr. Reagan to accept China's point of view when they met last month at the North-South summit conference in Cancún, Mexico. In fact, Chinese officials were optimistic after that session and were surprised when Mr. Huang later found no significant change in the U.S. position when he went to Washington for follow-up talks, according to sources here. It is that relationship that

From Peking's perspective, an early resolution seems unlikely. Chinese sources make two points: First, some of the trust built up between Peking and Washington, particularly during the Carter ad-ministration, has been lost by the Reagan administration's waffling. Second, this has become, more and more, a question of face for China, at home and abroad, and this makes it more difficult to accept any compromise.

China Hardens Position

The plan, reported in Washington after Mr. Huang's visit, to ex-tend Taiwan's contract to buy and assemble F-5E fighters and to upgrade the plane's engine and elec-tronics in satisfy its demand for a more sophisticated aircraft, is not welcomed bere as much of a compromise.

"Washington is not asking them to accept it, for Peking will never accept any arms sales to Taiwan, but this is something they might not nbject so loudly to," a diplo-mat said in assessing the Haig-Huang talks.

Effort to Solve Regional Strike Fails in Poland

WARSAW - Attempts to end Poland's longest regional strike failed Monday, and Solidarity un-inn leaders called on the Communist government to open major peace talks in Warsaw on Friday. Failure to resolve the 19-day-old dispute in the western region of Zielona Gora and continuing labor protests elsewhere cast a shadow over the planned negotiations. But Solidarity's spokesman said he did not believe they would affect the outcome.

"The strikes are a problem, but they are not going to jeopardize the course of negotiations," spokesman Marek Brunne said. He said that the union's execu-tive presidium had drawn up a list of six insure it paratied to disput of six issues it wanted to discuss with the authorities after last week's meeting of church, govern-ment and Solidarity leaders.

Misgivings

Local Solidarity officials in Zielona Gora said that the authorities did not show up to sign a strike agreement because of lastminute misgivings over some of the clauses.

Another strike continued at the Sosnowiec coal mine in Silesia, there was a hrief newspaper blackout in Wroclaw and farmers continued a sit-in at a Communis youth headquarters in the city of Siedlee

The final results for the 212member Chamber of Representatives showed the Flemish and French-speaking Socialists win-ning 61 seats, the same number as the Social Christians, who have dominated Belgian politics since World War II.

Social Christian leaders from Flanders and Wallonia have voiced the possibility of their party going into opposition. But the prospect of a coalition between Liberals and Socialists appeared slim, given the sharp divergences of policy between the two groups.

The Social Christians lost 14 seats in Flanders, falling to 43 seats, while their French-speaking partners in Brussels and Wallonia ost seven seats and now have 18.

Santa Yamani and OPEC Elves

"This is exactly the dream of everybody," gushed Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister. "It will make everybody very happy." He meant the OPEC oil cartel's new unified price policy.

Actually, it hasn't made anyone very happy, except, perhaps, the Saudis. Once again, the oil-importing nations have had a lesson they would prefer to ignore. Saudi Arabia is not a charity; Saudi oil policies serve Saudi interests.

Under the agreement reached in Geneva, many OPEC producers will cut their official oil prices by a few dollars a barrel. In return, Saudi Arabia, by far the largest exporter, will raise its price from $32 to $34. And it will lower production, from 9 million or 10 million barrels a day to 8.5 million. This price structure is now fixed, or so it is said, through 1982.

The agreement is a clear victory for the Saudis, who have long tried to impose a uniform price on all cartel members. By continuing to pump large volumes of oil at relatively low prices during a period of slack demand they took customers away from the OPEC price hawks. Now the hawks, notably Libya, Venezuela and Nigeria, have capitulated.

The Saudis say they did this in part out of friendship for the West. But it isn't much of a favor to consumers. The new policy is likely to stabilize oil prices for a while. And it is certainly preferable to a hostile Saudi Arabia cutting production to, say, 5 million barrels a day. That would send oil prices soaring again. But self-interest alone adequately explains Saudi Arabia's "moderation."

The Saudis have accumulated a large financial stake in the economic health of the major oil-importing nations. Their oil wealth underground exceeds their hoard of foreign currency, stock and precious metal. But their overseas investments have become a highly significant proportion of their net worth.

Even more important must be the Saudi fear of the effect that any short-term greed would have on the long-term value of the hundreds of billions of barrels still beneath the desert. The doubling of oil prices after the fall of the shah became a powerful incentive for importers to conserve energy and to switch to coal. There would be no gain for Saudi Arabia in a policy that drives the importers to even more saving and switching.

There is nothing surprising or particularly upsetting in the Saudis' pattern of calculation. At the moment, after all, their self-interest includes global economic stability, the containment of Soviet influence and a minimum of violence in the Middle East. The only thing worth remembering is that Saudi Arabia does no gratuitous favors for its friends. It bas no friends, only business partners.

8 Percent ...

The new unemployment figures make clear the dimensions of the recession into which the United States is sliding. There are now 8.5 million people looking for work. The rates are strikingly high among adults who are experienced workers and the primary wage earners for their families. Among all the economic statistics, this one most directly records sharp distress,

The conventional view - and certainly the administration's — is that a recession is a painful but, fortunately, only temporary lapse that will shortly correct itself as normal growth resumes. That's a rather optimistic outlook and, while it may prove to be right, you shouldn't assume that things will necessarily work out quite so easily or automatically.

The present situation recalls the autumn of 1974 when, after a year of mild recession, the economy suddenly began to collapse with frightening speed. The turnaround, four months later, and the subsequent recovery were accelerated by the customary methods. The Ford administration hastily abandoned its campaign against inflation and let the budget deficit rise to stimulate spending. The Federal Reserve Board pulled short-term interest rates down from 8 percent, when the serious trouble started, to 6 percent and less, That isn't likely to happen again. The 1975 deficit sent an enormous surge of adrenaline into the fiscal system. The deficit, which had been small, suddenly shot up to a level that, in proportion to the present size of the economy, was the equivalent of $140 billion. The Reagan administration can't open the emergency valves that way. It starts with a much higher deficit than President Ford did, and if it lets the fiscal 1982 deficit go much above the $80 hillion already in prospect, it will risk a panic in the financial markets.

The state of the financial markets also suggests that the Federal Reserve won't be able to turn on a steady supply of inexpensive credit as it did seven years ago. Interest rates are now falling because of the decline in business activity. But any forceful effort by the Federal Reserve to push that process is likely to have the opposite effect. Lenders remember that the recovery from the 1975 recession soon led to another great wave of inflation. If they see a deliberate effort to pump up credit, the fear of inflation may well seize the market again - as it has done several times in the past two years - and lift interest rates higher than ever. The monetary authorities haven't got much discretion.

Aggravating all the other uncertainties, the Reagan administration continues to be entangled in its fundamentally contradictory economic policy. It continues to be committed to a tight monetary policy, which pulls in one direction, while it runs large deficits that push in the other. As a practical matter it

In West Germany, Disaffection Is the Connecting Thread

MUNICH — The question may seem somewhat obuse, if not obscure. What, other than the fact that both events dominated the news in West Germany, is the connection between the demonstrations and violent protests that shook Frankfurt last week and the annual convention of the opposition Christian Democratic Party in Hamburg?

The answer is plenty, for both drew atten-tion to a growing although still inarticulate-ly expressed phenomenon of disaffection in this country to which neither the powers that be nor those aspiring to power have thus far found an effective and relative response.

There is - and had been for considerable time — something out of kilter here, and it is more than the tailspinning economy, the apparition of both leftist and rightist terrorism, or what some conveniently describe as a new youth rebellion and peace movement.

Rather, it is an alienation from the values and precepts to which West German society is reputedly committed, a disillusionment with previously acceptable goals, a ground swell of frustration, so to speak, with con-sumerism, promises of reforms unfulfilled, and economic growth for the sake of erowth.

More seems at stake than merely a gener-ation gap, as the large proportion of quin-quagenarians and scragenarians among the

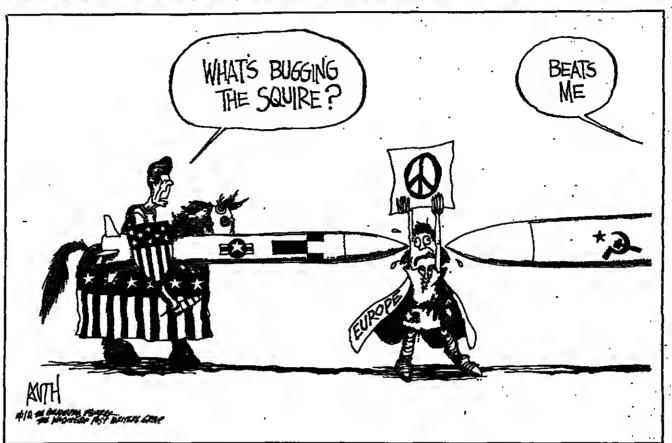

Consider, first, the troubles in Frankfurt, a city that Germans once labeled Klein Chi-kago because of its high crime rate but that most now call Wall Street on the Main for its high-rise banking towers and emergence as a new El Dorado of international finance. The central issue is a forest which the city and the state of Hesse are determined to raze in order to make room for an addi-tional runway at Frankfurt's international amoort_

The dispute has been going on for 12 years, preocrupying courts, judges, juries and lawyers, and came to a denouement recently when a final appellate tribunal ruled

It should be explained, perhaps, that the relationship between Germans and forests, like bees and flowers, has been traditionally close, and has become more so in recent years as woods have given way to asphalt and concrete in the form of highways, airports, shopping centers and apartment-house jungles. develop their own dynamics. Thus, predictably, the runway site attracted environmental protesters, many of them good law-abiding burghers from sorrounding villages, who, as the judicial process moved against them, turned to civil disobe-dience. That is, they erected a town of squatter huts, some of them marvels of architectural ingenuity, in the disputed woods. But such dynamics are two-sided, especially in West Germany, where the efficacy of government is usually measured by its grim determination to "govern," come what

ay. Thus last week, notwithstanding its own growing doubts about the economic need for a new runway, Hesse's left-liberal goverument coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats moved to enforce the mandate it won in court. Premier Holger Börner sanctioned police action against the squatters.

The cops moved in like an invading army and proved to be considerably less civil than the disobeyers. To complicate matters, the executive action was undertaken at a time when runway opponents were still collecting

Now, what does all this have to do with the Christian Democrats' convention in Hamburg?

Well, the troubles in Frankfurt, being symptomatic of a more general mood in West Germany, also point to the impotence

West Germany, also point to the impotence and bowilderment of the politicians in deal-ing with it — a malady afflicting Social, Free and Christian Democrats alike. But in Haraburg the Christian Democrais took an initial step, albeit besitant, toward a cure. Instead of holding a routine tribal meeting of the party faithful with the usual kind of political fertility rite, they invited 500 young people as guests, yielding the convention floor to them and their views on subjects ranging from ecology to NATO, from education to the economy. This "experimental dialogne with youth" from education to the economy. This "experimental dialogne with youth" may not have been quite as "historic" as the party leader, Helmut Kohl, subsequently ballyhooed — and one could hear the con-vention delegates sign with relief when they able to return to rolitics as usual.

That it was the conservative Christian Democratic Party that took the unprece-dented step has its reasons. One is that, as dented step has its reasons. One is that, is the opposition party, it can afford to take more political risks. Another is that it main ionally has been regarded as the party least popular among West Germany's young. But the challenge to which the Christian Democrats finally tried to rise last week is one that all the parties have been driving the disenchanted young — and the no-longer. so-young — to a new force on the political spectrum, the environment-oriented Greens and the Alternative List movement, which play a key role not merely in the peace play a key role not merely in the peace movement but in all matters of social pro-

Potential Strength

Whether they can do as well nationwide in 1984 is a different question. But what the Christian Democrats did last week was ex-press recognition of the immense potential in the votes of the disillusioned, which could well be the key to who next rules West Germany.

Somewhat belatedly, the Hesse state gov-ernment did the same. Over the weekend, Interior Minister Ekkehard Gries offered the runway protesters a moratorium on further tree-cutting - until the courts decide whether a referendum on the matter is constitutional.

Will Reagan Lead a Retreat From the Open-Skies Policy?

WASHINGTON - Through-out its history the Republican Party has been possessed, ci-ther simultaneously or alternatingly, by at least two souls — those of an authentic 18th-century liberal and of a 19th- and 20th-century protectionist. While the rhetoric of the Reagan administration is the metoric of the free-market Jekyll, all too many of its actions in re-cent months have been the actions of the protectionist Hyde. Witness, for example, the policies or policy

... And the Loss of Balance

Meanwhile, President Reagan, having promised a balanced budget, decides on further reflection that it's too hard. He offers the not very persuasive explanation that he never really considered it a promise, but rather a "goal."

The significance of this retreat in strictly economic terms is secondary. Although most economists think that a declining trend in the deficit would be very belpful, few attach much importance to achieving arithmetical balance on any given date. The real impact of the president's new position will be measured in people's estimation of the competence of this administration. Mr. Reagan had it right earlier this year when he spoke of the budget as a test of political control of the nation's affairs. He, like his predecessor, offered the budget as a symbol of the exercise of control and now, like his predecessor, he is wavering.

Mr. Carter came to office, like all presidents, with a list of commitments that, in practice, conflicted with each other. When it came to choices, Mr. Carter gave priority to employment. There he was spectacularly successful, achieving a more rapid rise in the number of jobs than any other administration since World War II. But the cost was renewed inflation at a dangerously high level. and a hudget deficit that remained both large and intractable.

Since Mr. Reagan's economic program is even more flagrantly inconsistent, he has now arrived at the unpleasant moment when he must choose among its many promises -or "goals." His statements of the past several days indicate that he is going to give priority to reducing the income tax. He appears to have decided to defend those tax cuts at all costs. Mr. Carter lost control of the budget through poor relations with Congress, the distractions that beset him, and his own divided purposes. Mr. Reagan seems to be deliberately sacrificing control to the singleminded pursuit of unrealistically low taxes.

Having achieved a "cease-fire," the Poles must go on to a durable peace. The immediate problem is food But the major problem is the economic structure of the nation, which produced these scarcities. Radical changes in the structure may be called for, and the Poles must not shrink from such changes just because they seem too drastic. -From the National Herald (Lucknow, India).

We would expect the Saudi government to discontinue its support of terrorist activity in that part of the world, and offer its support for at least the spirit of the Camp David accords. Now we may be witnessing another such retreat from principle: On Sept. 11, the Civil Aeronautics Board, accoding to a request of the president, postponed for four months its order withdrawing antitrust immunity from U.S. carriers for participating with foreign air-lines in the collective setting of fares over the North Atlantic.

We cannot unilaterally transfer into the international arena our new domestic aviation policy of deregulation and open competi-tion: international airlines markets are controlled in large part by bilateral agreements negotiated be-tween governments, and all too many foreign governments insist on limiting entry, regulating capac-ity and fixing prices.

Trading Favors

The policy we adopted under President Carter was one of trading liberalizations for liberalizations - offering foreign carriers ket in exchange for agreement by their governments to admit com-peting American airlines into their cities, to accept our increasingly liberal charter rules (no longer need all passengers on a charter flight have the same blood type), to eschew limits on the number of flights and to refrain from disallowing competitive fares. Creation and Science

I am a systems analyst designing and writing software for scientific applications. I also believe in cre-ation, and would like to ask Flora Lewis (IHT, Oct. 20) why such a belief is unscientific or associated with a desire to stop learning. The creation theory, like the theory of evolution, explains the origins of the universe and of life. It is not a simplistic escape from difficult scientific questions, but a comprehensive explanation of the observable data.

The consistency of creation with the fossil record, geology, and other earth science data has been documented and demonstrated many times.

To suggest that creationism is anti-science is wrong. It is saying, "You are not a scientist because participating in any IATA fare-set ting conferences, simply by repealing the antitrust exemption they now enjoy. The Civil Aeronautics Board moved in that direction last May so far as the North Atlantic routes were concerned; this is the action that has now been postponed until next January.

If, as the matter now stands, the board's order does indeed go into effect in January, this note of alarm may prove to have been pre-mature. Still, it is worth sounding, for two reasons. First, there are some officials in the Reagan administration who agree with the complaints of the major interna-tional carriers that our liberal policies have gone too far, that we gave away the store at their ex-pense. (To be fair, there are other officials who do not agree at all.)

Second, this postponement comes at a terribly unfortmate time. Officials of the European Economic Community are drafting regulations to bring aviation into closer compliance with the procompetitive articles of the Treaty of Rome. For us to be giving the impression that we are ready to pull back from our previous free-trading policies plays into the hands of the opponents of these new EEC initiatives.

It seems to me essential, therefore, to confront the complaints of our incumbent carriers, and the sc-companying demand that we go back to the days of governmentally negotiated and sanctioned carte-ization.

The opponents of increased competition on international routes claim U.S. carriers have suffered a serious erosion in market shares as bilateral agreements have been liberalized. That is true. However, the decline during this recent period has been no more rapid than in the years immediately preceding. Our losses in market share have been more than accounted for by declines in the fair because foreign governments subsidize their airlines and discriminate against ours. But our international carriers have had some

Taking Human Rights Seriously

By William Safire

WASHINGTON - The Reagan adminis-tration intends to take the human rights issue seriously.

When the nomination of Ernest Lefever to the human rights post in the State Department was with-drawn (many believed his concern was limited to violations by Communist nations), the Reagan men took their time before sending a new name up to Con-gress. Leo Cherne, Leonard Garment and the columbut recommended "somebody like Elliott Abrams." Abrams, 33, is assistant secretary of state for United Nations matters. His neo-conservative credentials include being the stepson-in-law of Commentary magazine's editor, Norman Podhoretz, and a former aide to Sen, Daniel P. Moynihan, Abrams' nomination last week to the sensitive human rights post signals Reagan's desire to live up to his 1976 campaign commitments.

Underscoring the significance of the nomination is the policy expressed in an "eyes-only" memorandum, dated Oct. 27, to Secretary Alexander Haig from Deputy Secretary William Clark and Undersecretary for Management Richard Kennedy recommending the Abrams appointment.

'Fundamental Distinction'

"Human rights is at the core of our foreign poli-cy," states the Clark-Kennedy memo. "We will never maintain wide public support for our foreign policy mless we can relate it to American ideals and to the defense of freedom."

"The fundamental distinction" between America and the Soviet bloc is a sharp difference in attitudes toward freedom, says the memo: "Our ability to resist the Soviets around the world depends in part on our ability to draw this distinction and to persuade others of it." The writers recognize that one cause of the wave of neutralism abroad is the notion of rela-tivism: "Why arm, and why fight, if the two superpowers are morally equal? Our human rights policy must be at the center of our response."

Fine words, but to achieve credibility Washington will have to knock its friends occasionally. Here is how the new policy handles that: "If a nation, friend-ly or not, abridges freedom, we should acknowledge it, stating that we regret and oppose it. However, ... human rishts (arel not advanced by replacing a bad regime with a worse one, or a corrupt dictator with a zealous Communist Politburo."

That is a necessary straddle, but activists will hall this passage: "A human tights policy means trouble, for it means hard choices which may adversely affect certain bilateral relations. At the very least, we will have to speak honestly about our friends' human rights violations and justify any decision wherein other considerations (economic, military, etc.) are de-terminative. There is no escaping this without de-stroying the credibility of our policy, for otherwise we would be simply coddling friends and criticizing fors." locs."

Internal Concession

In dealing with the Russians, Abrams appear to have extracted an internal concession to ensure that his will not be a cosmetic role: "This administration might possibly seek the repeal of the Jackson-Vanik Amendment," which links trade concessions to Cost Amendment," which links trade concessions to Con-munist nations to their willingness to allow dissidents to emigrate. "Abrams has made clear,", reads the memo, "that he could only support such an effort in the context of the sort of agreement reached between Jackson and Kissinger in 1975. To seek repeal with-out such an agreement would in his view, make a mockery of our human rights policy" The memo contains a wistful paragraph suggesting that "we should move away from 'human rights' as a term, and begin to speak of 'individual rights,' politi-cal rights' and 'civil liberties.'" Presumably this is because "human" rights have been mistaken by some to mean an entitlement not to starve. Still, the name-to mean an entitlement not to starve. Still, the name changing notion is wrongheaded: "human" rights are rooted in Locke's "nanural rights," put in Franch phrase as "the rights of man" and changed by Elea-nor Roosevelt at the United Nations to "human" rights" to include upper rights" to include women.

In the Reagan espousal of that policy, the good guys have won. Hats off to the beleasured scoreiny of state; let us hope he does not find the public perusal of his interoffice mail too great an andoance. We should be prepared to wade through rems of soporific eyes-only or teeth-only memos to find one line like "A human rights policy means trouble." Unless it means trouble, a human rights policy means nothing.

LONDON - Seventy percent of British pediatricians who answered a television questionnaire believe severely handicapped bahies rejected by parents should be allowed to die, according to a television documentary being screened Monday by the British Broadcasting Corp.

Two public opinion polls, one before the recent trial of a pediatrician, Dr. Leonard Arthur, 55, who allowed a 3-day-old Down's Syndrome (mongolism) haby to die, and one during the trial, showed an increase in the number of people who also believe such babies should be allowed to die by withholding medical treatment. Historian Will Durant, 96, Dies Two Weeks After Wife

By Richard West Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES - Will Durant. 96, the Pulitzer Prize historian, died Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, two days after his birthday.

Mr. Durant died without having been informed of the death of his wife and collaborator. Ariel, 83, who died two weeks ago at their tion," written partly with his wife. The 10th book of that series, "Rousseau and Revolution," woo the Pulitizer Prize for literature in 1968.

Some critics said the Durants were popularizers of history, not serious scholars, but others said they had the remarkable gift of making past ages accessible to cootemporary readers.

Paradoxical Views

The views of Mr. Durant, a former Catholic seminarian, were ofteo paradoxical. Mr. Durant said he lost his Catholic faith when a young man after reading Darwin's "Origin of Species" and "The Descent of Man" and Marx's "Das Kapital" and "Communist Manifesto" before taking his bachelor of arts degree at St. Peter's College in Jersey City, N.J., in 1907. He said later that "'Origin of Species' turned me inside out by showing man as a trousered ape cursed with loquacity" and that "'Communist Manifesto' set the me on fire with socialist ardor."

Mr. Durant said he always realized, though, that Christ was the greatest figure in history and that mankind's search for God was primarily responsible for the march of civilization.

'Communism — complete equality - is a Utopian dream that never will come true," Mr. Durant said when he was a lecturer in philosophy at the University of California, Los Angeles in 1935. The will to power, greed, ambi-tion, and the love of family are buman traits that cannot be divorced from the human mind. Nature is not a Communist."

In 1957, Mr. Durant predicted the return of religion to Russia by the end of this century. It will come about through disillusioo-ment in the present system, he said. Mr. Durant once attributed the upsurge of crime in America in the last 20 years or so to a decline in morals brought about by people turning away from religion.

Taught at Ferrer School

Mr. Durant was born in North Adams, Mass., in 1885 to parents of French-Canadian Catholic stock. After graduating from St. Peter's, he taught Latin, French, English and geometry at another Catholic institution, Seton Hall College, South Orange, N.J., then entered the seminary at Seton Hall to study for the priesthood.

He left the seminary in 1911 to become a teacher at the Ferrer

Modern School, an experimental libertarian institution in New York City, where he met his future wife and collaborator, 13-year-old Ida Kaufman, one of his pupils whom he took to calling Ariel, after the spirit from Shakespeare's "The Tempest," because she was "as strong and brave as a boy, and as swift and mischievous as an elf."

"From the first moment there was something in Ariel that captured my eyes and possessed my memory," Mr. Durant recalled later. "I was attracted by her high spirits. She laughed and sang with the innocence of a girl who had uever known theology." Two years later the scholarly

To support his young wife, Mr. Durant served as director of the Labor Temple School in New York City and, in 1917, as an instructor in philosophy at Colum-bia University. He also took his doctorate in philosophy at Columbia in 1917.

They had one great ambition in ose years: to have enough money to devote their lives to historical scholarship. They realized this wish in 1926, when Mr. Durant published bis "The Story of Philos-ophy," which became a best seller.

Tanzania's Salim Tries Hard to Defeat U.S. Opposition on UN Job

By Bernard D. Nossiter

New York Times Service UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. -The United States has told him no eight times, but Salim A. Salim of Tanzania still hopes to persuade Washington that he is neither too radical nor too much the African nationalist to lead the United Nations. "Salim, the representative of Tanzania, of Africa, is not Salim the secretary-general," he said. "As secretary-general, he must always represent a consensus, must build a consensus. He must win the confidence of conflicting parties."

Mr. Salim, his nation's foreign minister at the age of 39, is a husky man who jogs in the heat of Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, in a losing battle to hold down his weight. He speaks in carnest tones, insisting that the test for secretarygeneral should be "a person's in-tegrity and sense of fair play," not the public, political views he has voiced in the past.

8 Ballots

The Security Council has gooe through eight hallots to choose a secretary-general. On three, Mr. Salim collected at least the minimum nine votes, but the U.S. veto blocked him. Washington has also voted against him on the other five. He is still in the race, howev-er, because China, oo all eight rounds, has just as firmly vetoed the incumbent, Kurt Waldheim.

The United States declines to explain its position. But informally, U.S. diplomats have indicated that the Reagan administration does not trust Mr. Salim. They doubt that be would act impartially oo issues involving South Africa or Israel, they fear he is too inde-pendent and they regard him as a Third World radical in contrast to

"There would be no reason for South Africa to doubt my integri-ty," Mr. Salim said, but "I can't be impartial on apartheid. Who can be?"

The question is particularly acute since South Africa resists a south-West Africa, or Namibia, asserting that elections there would be supervised by a "biased" United Nations that would provide peacekeepers in a demilitarized zone.

Io his speeches at the United Nations, Mr. Salim has frequently spoken of his "brothers" in the "gallant" band of guerrilla fighters resisting South African rule in Namibia. But his remarks have ; been more restrained than those of THIN IN officials of other African states. He has, on occasion, even referred to the Pretoria government without employing the automatic epithet, "racist regime."

He recalled that as president of the Security Council in 1976, he met with R. F. Botha, South Africa's representative, oow the for-i eign minister. Despite the absence! of Tanzanian relations with South i Africa, Mr. Salim said, he was a UN officer and ignored his government's position. Tanzania, like other African nations, broke relations with Israel, after the 1967 Middle East war, and Mr. Salim has delivered dozens of addresses deploring Israeli actions and upholding Palestinian rights. However, his speeches fre-quently underline the right of Israel to exist as well as the right of Palestinian Arabs to a state of their own. Mr. Salim was ambassador to Egypt at the age of 22. Ten years later he earned a master's degree; from Columbia University while leading Tanzania's delegation, ?

abrasive methods have alienated many officials of the other food agencies. Indeed, as many of the officials interviewed see it, some of the food organization's initiatives have as much to do with Mr. Saouma's desire to build and maintain support for himself in the Third World as with the welfare of the eveloping countries themselves. Elected in 1976 under provisions calling for a one-time, six-year term, Mr. Saouma soon engineered a change in the rules to permit a second term,

Although he is unopposed, his critics charge that the director gen-eral, who is able to personally dispense more than $140 million in emergency food aid and technical assistance every year, has doled out money in return for political support. Mr. Saouma's backers call such charges ridiculous. But there is a widespread feeling that morale at the agency has deteriorated.

Among the more serious charges directed against the food organiza-tion is that it has failed to challenge what are often clearly counterproductive agriculture policies of its 147 member nations. World Bank economists are also

Taxes and Art in France By Source Melikian Thus, at the top end of the market, then

International Herald Tribune

PARIS - The French government has finally gone back on its initial intention to treat artistic possessions as just another part of its citizens' private fortune. Works of art will therefore not be subjected to the wealth tax voted by the French National Assembly.

But the wealth tax has not been suppressed altogether. It has been subtly but effectively reintroduced through an amendment initiated by Michel Debré, a member of the opposition, whereby any work of art sold abroad after obtaining the official export beense requested for any such sale, shall be subject to the wealth tax.

To appreciate the impact of this provision, it must be realized that the value of art in the French market bears no relationship to its international value. The Picasso self-portrait of 1901 owned by a French businesswoman that was sold in New York for $5.83 million after having been given a presale estimate of "$2 million plus" by Sotheby's experts would have been given a maximum $400,000-$500,000 value on the French market — there just aren't huyers in France prepared to pay more. Overall, the government'a 11th-hour reconsideration of its original plan was requested by Pres-ident Francois Mitterrand and the reason officially given was the president's concern that artistic creation should be encouraged and that buyers should not be deterred from acquiring contemporary art. The reasoning seems to be that fabulous masterpieces bought now for a few thousand francs might come to be worth millions, and, as such, be taxable in the foreseeable future.

Unstated but more plausible are other reasons First and foremost was the belated realization that hy being forced underground, the market would pose serious threats to the national heritage — le patrimoine artistique — with important works of art slipping quietly across the border. A second, equally compelling, cause is the tech-nical difficulty of assessing the commercial value of works of art. At any auction, prices actually fetched are frequently above or below presale estimates by 50 percent or more. There just would not be enough experts in the country to cope with the thousands of litigations that would inevitably have arisen.

Yet another consideration seems to have been the unfairness of penalizing those who have inher-ited important works of art but have no cash. That is generally the case with deceased artists' widows and children, or scions of impoverished families.

The last consideration, ironically, is the only one that can be said to have been fully met by the government's turnabout. For contrary to what has been widely suggested, the French art market is not back to square one.

First there is the Debre amendment,

To this must be added the fact that in recent months, French authorities have, by all accounts, developed a tendency to deny export licenses to even those works of art that are of no interest to French museums. All professionals complain about customs harassment unparalleled in the Western world. The curtain is being pulled down, rather than up, over the French market - in ap-parent disregard of EEC rules.

Thus, at the top end of the market, there re-mains a serious possibility that art will go underground. For different reasons, this may also happen at the lower end.

The idea that art might be subjected to taxation had never occurred to most Frenchmen and the latest turmoil has frightened them. Modest collectors have been more scared than wealthy buyers, because they spend much more than they can afford on art anyway and, above all, because many of them own a few splendid pieces that are now worth immensely more than what they paid for them 10 or 20 years ago. Small or not, many art buyers now make it clear that they intend to stay put in the future.

The less said, the better. Henceforth, art of whatever value will be shrouded in secrecy, with all the damaging consequences that this involves for museums - no loans, no donations, no more access to pieces of documentary consequence.

Hedge Against Inflation

Secrecy aside, the major consequence of the lat-est measures is likely to be a tremendous boost to very expensive art buys - virtually the only hedge against inflation left that is now immune from taxation. It is difficult to guess the extent to which this may set off the shutting down of French borders. It certainly will not be enough in the upper-most bracket, from the franc equivalent of $500,000 upward — local buyers do not have that money available for art. Any French resident who has gone on record, either through art publications or previous loans to exhibitions, as owning a work worth anywhere from $2 million to $5 million can consider his assets to have been reduced overnight by as much as two-thirds, unless he knows for sure they would be allowed out of France - a remote contingency under present circumstances.

It is in the lower present circumstances. It is in the lower bracker, from about $45,000 to $450,000, and chiefly in the "easier" categories re-quiring no highly specialized comnoissentship, that the boost is likely to be most apparent — Impres-sionist and modern masters, 18th-century furniture of a very fine order not exceeding $100,000 to $200,000. Highly important graphics and drawings will go through the roof — they can be neatly slipped into attaché cases. An intimation of the new trend was given on

An intimation of the new trend was given on Oct. 21 at a Drouot sale conducted by the auc-tioneer Jean-Louis Picard with the assistance of the expert Denise Rousseau, when a Toulouse-Lantree lithograph was bought for a world-record 259,000 francs by a Frenchman outbidding a Japanese dealer.

Nontaxable Assets

This, of course, may not last long. Very shortly, the problem for auctioneers will not be whom to sell to but where to get the goods from - owners will hang on to art possessions as nontaxable as-

A downward trend might, on the contrary, affect highly specialized fields where people buy for pleasure, not for investment.

In short, the havoc caused by rash talk and illinformed improvisation in this complex, highly sensitive field has not been undone, even if the worst has been spared. It would take a sophisticated set of measures to do the job. The French government, pressed by other urgent matters, is unlikely to give the problem another thought. Too bad for le patrimoine and the artistic life of France, where collectors play a vital, little-understood role.

The energy crisis has made the lowering of automobile fuel consumption a major objective. One of the first steps is to reduce an automobile's weight. That's why Rhône-Poulenc has developed high performance materials lighter in weight, but robust in performance.

Only the Geobankers have instant voice communication linking 7 foreign exchange cities-simultaneously.

Speed is absolutely vital in getting you the most favorable rate available when you buy or sell foreign currency. That's why the Geobankers of Manufacturers Hanover have developed a unique communications system that outspeeds both the telephone and telex.

The system allows a seven-way conversation between New York, London, Paris, Frankfurt, Zurich, Brussels and Milan.

Now our foreign exchange trading professionals in all seven cities can tell each other instantly, at any given moment, the local asking and offering prices in any major currency. Not only that, but they can also flash up-to-the-minute news of local developments affecting their own currency.

We save time. You save money.

Good news always travels fast.

By passing your trading interest to all seven cities simultaneously, we are often able to get you a rate that's better in one place than the others—particularly on trades with broken maturity dates. When Frankfurt quotes a rate on marks, for instance, London may call out a better price—and New York may jump in with a better one still.

Also helping to bring about the best transaction possible is the fact that each member of our trading staff specializes in one currency while trading in all.

The Geobanking traders in conference, clockwise from the top, are: D. van der Fraenen in Brussels; F. Wirtz in Frankfurt; R.A.W. Dukes in London; N. Buratti in Milan; J.P. de Laet in Paris; and N. Röhren in Zurich. Center: A. Agostini in New York.

Oil Shale: A $3.4-Billion Gamble

By Robert D. Hershey Jr.

New York Times Service PARACHUTE, Colo. - Six months ago this dusty, western Colorado town, 17 miles from the nearest motel room and an hour's drive from a hospital, had only 300 residents, most of whom maintained a weary cynicism about yet another series of reports of impending economic boom. No longer. Parachute now has a population of 900, the first traffic light has been installed, the price of commercial property has tripled and on a nearby mesa the first house has just been completed in a new community that eventually will house 25,000 persons. Behind it all is oil shale. In the mountains along Parachute Creek, Exxon and other companies have begun to pour billions of dollars into two hnge proj-ects to turn the immense reserves of oil shale into shate oil.

UAW Accepts Contract Changes at Ford Plant

From Agency Dispatches DETROIT - United Auto Workers at a fourth Ford Motor plant voted Sunday to accept non-wage contract concessions in hopes of avert-ing layoffs or a factory shutdown. Ford has said its U.S. work force cannot compete economically with overseas facilities.

The proposed changes in work rules are expected to cut Ford's opera-ting costs at the suburban Sterling Heights axle plant. The plant's work force has been reduced from 6,000 to 2,450 in three years.

The changes give Ford more flexibility in scheduling, overtime and work conditions but do not affect wages or other matters covered by the UAW's national contract with Ford, a UAW official said.

"But in the second half of 1982." he said, "we will begin to see a very strong upturn as interest rates fall, the second round of tax cuts is in place and defense procurements continue to increase.

Mr. Weidenbaum said he expects the budget deficit to shrink in fiscal 1983 "and in 1984 it will be even smaller." He added that he favors spending cuts over tax increases to reduce the 1982 budget deficit

Mr. Regan also said "it is entire-ly possible" that the budget deficit in fiscal 1982 could be higher than the $57.9 billion recorded in fiscal 198t

He said President Reagan is not ruling out new tax increases to cut the federal deficit, but the president will first watch Congress to see what lawmakers do with ad-ministration plans for major new budget cuts.

Mr. Regan said the administration is preparing plans for new spending cuts in social programs.

Yamani Vows to Use Output To Defend New OPEC Price

Resters LONDON — Saudi Arabia will thwart any attempts by other countries to raise oil prices before the end of 1982 by increasing its production, Saudi Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani was quoted Mooday as saying.

Sheikh Yamani issued the warning to other members of OPEC during a meeting with British jouroalists in Riyadh.

He was quoted as saying that Saudi Arabia, the world's leading oil exporter, stepped up produc-tion in October to 9.6 million bartels a day from 9 million in Sep-tember, which added to the world's surplus of crude oil and forced acceptance of a unified base price of $34 a barrel by OPEC members. While Sheikh Yamani said he saw no reason to change his country's November production level of 8.5 millioo barrels a day before the end of 1982, he said he would move against any attempt to push prices above the levels agreed to by OPEC in Geneva carlier this month.

The reports said Sheikh Yamani suggested that at its next meeting in December in Abu Dhabi, OPEC might lower the $4 a barrel differential over the $34 base price allowed some producers on grounds of quality or closeness to major markets.

THE FBI AND MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. By David J. Garrow. 320 pp. $15.95

WHAT is left to be said aboot the FBI's relentless pursuit of Martin Luther King Jr. during the 1960s? Nearly everyone knows that the bureau wiretapped and bugged King for years, tried to tar him as a Communist, sought to disrupt his personal life, and even made a hamhanded attempt to force his resignation from the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and replace him with someone more to the FBI's liking. It was clear long ago, eveo while both men were still alive, that through some peculiar chemistry, Martin Luther King Jr. brought out the very worst in J. Edgar Hoover and became the object of the FBI director's obsessive harred, causing Hoover to make some of the worst mistakes of his long and checkered career. Now comes David J. Garrow, who teaches at the University of North Carolina, with a new, important, and profoundly inquiring analysis of the bureau's war against King. The for-mat is academic and at times irritating, but Garrow's book nonetheless helps us understand more about what went haywire in American society in the 60s.

Relying heavily on personal inter-views and on documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, Garrow identifies and explains three separate phases in the FBI's investigatioo of King. The study of "Commu-nist influence" over the "Negro Movement," the effort to "neutralize" or even destroy King personally and the search for political intelligence about the civil rights and antiwar movements. He rejects some of the stan-dard explanations for the bureau's behavior, including the interpretation that Hoover simply felt a need to fight back viciously at any single person who criticized him or his bureau, as King had done.

Fear of Communist Infiltration

The first phase of the King investigation, Garrow argues was motivated by a genuine (if largely musbstantiat-ed) fear of Communist infiltration of the civil rights movement; the second, by the disgust of both "the puritans" and the "voyenrs" in the FB1 and elsewhere in government over King's personal behavior; and the third, by anxiety over the political and cultural threat that King symbolized for the American majority.

Along the way, Garrow provides a dramatic and sensitive portrait of King, warts and all — one which, ironically, might not have been possi-ble without resort to the results of the ENEr. superstraint coursellance of the FBI's electronic surveillance of the civil rights leader. He also reveals details of an FB1 undercover operation, code-named "Solo," which for many years provided the burean with rich details on the internal operations of the U.S. Communist Party and its financial ties to the Soviet Union. It was "Solo" that brought the FBI's attention to former Communist Stanley Levison, one of King's closest friends and advisers.

But this book also reminds us that the 1960s were a time of red-baiting for the United States almost as se-rious as the periods just before World

Here is the FBI proceeding oo the as-sumption that "once a Communist, always a Communist." (In one instance, that would be laughable were it not so deplorable, an FBI field office reports that it has found nothing subversive about one of King's associates - only about one of King's associates — only to be rebuked by headquarters for not establishing that he was "ani-Com-munist"). Here is the CIA interpreting the growing opposition within the civ-il rights movement to U.S. involve-ment in Vietnam as the work of "Pe-king-line Communists." Here are key officials of the Justice Department and the White House during Demo cratic administrations accenting the cratic administrations, accepting the FBI's careless labelling of U.S. citi-zens without so much as seeking proof or explanation. Garrow's work reinforces earlier evidence about the bureau's abuses, and it is especially good on the subject of "the unfortunate William Sullivan," the FBI official who would in retire-ment portray himself as the foremost defender of civil liberties in the bureau's ranks, but who turns out to i have left a paper trail implicating him the most heinous invasions of King's privacy. Yet what is still remarkable after all these years is the list of other names - outside the FBI - that are impli-cated in the bounding of King. If Sullivan despised King on the basis of "puritan" instincts, those same instincts badly clouded the judgment of Robert Kennedy; if Hoover was the archetypal "voyeur" titillated by his tapes and transcripts of King, he scarcely outdid Lyndon B. Johnson. And then there is the parade of Johnson aides, many of them still active in public life, who, among others, Gar-row thinks, used the investigation of King as the cover for their blatant political abuse of the FBI during the Democratic National Convention of 1964 in Atlantic City.

Because this story necessarily ends with the assassination of King in Memphis in April, 1968 — in which the FBI is not implicated — the subsequent abuse of the bureau and the rest of the intelligence apparatus by the Nixon administration scarcely comes up here; but it is precisely because the later Republican exploits are so well known that it is useful to recall the earlier Democratic ones.

Possible Repetition

It is also useful to remember that the horrors detailed in this book could be repeated tomorrow, if a few existing guidelines were repealed and the bureau were put back into the hands of someone so inclined. To this day, no legal charter has been enacted tell-ing the FBI what it can and cannot do. Although the current FBI director William Webster, and his predecessor Clarence Kelley, said they would wel-come such a charter and although a reasonable (albeit imperfect) one was once drafted, its chances of adoption are slim indeed because the talk now is of the need to free the various intelligence agencies from unreasonable.

restraints. Similarly, the talk now is of the need to tighten up the Freedom of In-formation Act, so as not to impede these agencies from doing their necessary work. If that effort succeeds, one big difference will be that if and when the abuses occur again, it will be far hard-

Garrow has done. Perhaps it will be more comfortable not to know what

THE right way to bid as opener with two five-card black suits is a theoretical point that continues to divide the experts. Some always bid one club; some always bid one spade, and some vary their procedure according to the strength of the hand or the quality of the suits. With very powerful hands, there is c clear advantage in opening one club, with a jump in spaces to follow and then a rebid of that suit. With intermediate or minimum hands, there is more to debate. One argument for one spade is that it makes it harder for the opponents to enter the bidding. Against that, the advocates of one club can expect an orderly develop-ment of the auction, bidding spades twice to complete a picture of the distribution.

A one-spade opening bid eventually led to an unsound slam contract on the diagramed deal. But North's first. response was perhaps to blame. With a two-suited hand, a jump shift is al-spade, two diamonds (or three diamonds), two spades, three no-trump. As it was, North's jump to three hearts quickly carried the partnership past three oo-trump, often the least evil on a mislitting hand. The bidding wandered on to six spades, and South faced an uphill task after the opening lead of the diamond ten.

He won with the ace in dummy and played the ace-king of hearts to dis-card his diamond loser. He then ruffed a diamond with a low trump, cashed three club winners and ruffed a club. When this passed off peacefully, he had reached this ending:

This would work if East held king-x-x, but would fail against the actual dis-tribution if West had the wit to dock. The declarer, took a different tack and succeeded. He ruffed a heart and and successed. In the lack in ruffed his last club with the jack in dummy. That left him ace-queen-8 of trump, and it was a simple matter to cover any card played by East to inthus made his slam and vindicated, perhaps, his opening bid of one spade.

NCAA Limitations on Recruitment Broaden U.S. Football Power Base

By Gordon S. White Jr. New York Times Service

New York Times Service NEW YORK — From the day that Johnny Majors became bead football coach at the University of Pitts-burgh, Dec. 19, 1972, until mid-August, 1973, he and his new staff scoured the nation for as many football recruits as they could find. They signed 76 oew-comers, and 67 of them showed up at preseason train-ing camp. according to Jackie Sherrill, an assistant then and Pitt's head coach since Majors left for Ten-oessee in 1977. oessee in 1977.

That grab bag of freshmen and junior college trans-fers produced the nation's best football player of 1976

- Tony Dorset, the tailback who won the Heisman Trophy. It also helped produce that year's best team. That unlimited recruiting of players also brought Pitt up from the depths of football despair to a rank-ing position among the nation's powers, where it is likely to remain for some time. Winners of eight straight games this season, the Panthers are ranked No. I in both wire-service polls.

But this recruiting method for a quick comeback to prominence is unlikely to happen anywhere again be-cause of current National Collegiate Athletic Association mies limiting the oumber of players a team may recruit.

The once-weaker teams now are making progress because the long-standing powers are being restricted, and thus are being brought back to the pack. Pitt probably would have made it to the top under its dynamic coaches - but not as fast.

While Majors and his Pitt staff were grabbing every player they could, the NCAA enacted its "95-30" rule in Jannary, 1973. It limited a college to 30 new play-ers a year and a total of 95 football scholarships. The 30 limit went into effect in 1974 and the 95 was effec-tive in 1978. Bittebrank hunt and into the 95 was effective in 1978. Pittsburgh just got in under the wire with its buge recruiting job.

But the 95-30 rule is not the only reason that the power in Division I-A football is no longer concen-trated among a handful of teams. College coaches and officials list other contributing factors:

• The NCAA limitation on the size of coaching staffs — there can now be only oce head coach and eight full-time assistants. Staffs of 15 or more at ma-jor powers were oot unusual in the 1960s.

· The increased number of high schools playing football in certain regions of the country and the improvement of high school coaching.

· The commitments by many colleges to spend money and improve facilities, an attraction to recruits and a way to develop players on hand pi, Southern Methodist, Florida State, Miami of Flor-ida, Washington State, Iowa State, Clemson and North Carolina, teams that were rarely up there before the 95-30 rule was enacted.

Speaking of his quick-success methods at Pitts-burgh, 1973-1976, Majors said, "People think the oumbers brought us back. They belped but really only helped equalize is for Pist.

"When you take in 25 a year and you play Southern California, Oklahoma, Georgia twice, Florida State and Georgia Tech you have problems. Some of them were giving 45 scholarships a year. What we did was not so astronomical, really, compared to what others had been doing for wars. had been doing for years.

"It wasn't a matter of being hoggish," Majors said. "It wasn't a matter of being hoggish," Majors said. "It was a matter of survival. But it was the shot that gave us the start, and then the oext year it was quality recruiting as we got players like Matt Cavanaugh in 1974." Cavanaugh became the all-America quarter-back on the 1976 team.

Raised Consciousness

"I think the 95-30 rule is the main reason for all these upsets," he continued. "Also, many more uni-versity people are conscious of the factors in having a football program be successful. It helps a university overall and thus they spend the money. Improving stadiums is an example.

"The variety of offenses and defenses possible be-cause of the spread of talent resulting from the 95-30 rule is also a factor in other teams' improving."

Said Bob James, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference: "The 95-30 rule was a coorributing factor in the improvement of many teams. But the biggest factor in the improvement of Clemson and North Carolina, in particular, is the improvement of high school football in our area.

There are more good players in bigger high schools in North Carolina and more of them are stay-ing in the state to play college football than there were when 1 took this job 10 years ago." A recent survey by the NCAA showed that of 450 North Carolina high school graduates playing in Divi-sion 1-A college football, 358 of them are playing at North Carolina universities.

sion 1-A college football, 338 of them are playing at North Carolina universities. James said, "The migration to the South has helped this come about. Look at Florida, for example." The NCAA survey shows that only five other states pro-duce more major college football players than Florida — California, Texas, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois. The subject was pressure. The pressure was palpable out there hurried movem cuts, slam clubs, muttered curses. There was absolutely no chitchat and little laughter among the threesomes, as there often is in a regular tournament. The pressure was greatest for players who were there for the first time.

Somebody came out on the sourse and said it looked like 296 would make it, Dunsway, on the 15th at the time, figured his cushion was just about adequate to bring him in under 296, or 12-over for four rounds on the tough Waterwood National Country Club course,

As it turned out, his margin was parely enough because he bogeyed the last three holes - hitting one mant drive, catching a bunker and finding the rough twice. Thus-inded a dreary round of 77, for a 296.

Dunaway was too fidgety to lang around watching figures posted on the scoreboard, as other players did. Instead, he kept askng friends, "Is 296 going to make t?" In the end, when all 72 scores vere in, 296 was good for a 10-way ie for 25th place - the bottom imit.

Everybody

"Everybody feels the pressure," Dunaway explained. "Even if Jack Nicklans were here, he would feel the pressure.

This is your livelihood, something you've always wanted to do. It's right out there in front of you. You can't fake it. In another business you might not have such a good week or a good day, but you still have a second chance. With this, this is it. "That's why there is tension,

Faced with growing economic problems in the early 1970s, NCAA football powers imposed on themselves limitations on grants-in-aid or athletic scholarships for football each year. But the 95-30 rule's most no-ticeable effect has turned out to he a change in the power structure of major college football nationwide. No longer can a team recruit 50 or more players just to keep some oo the bench so that opponents cannot have them. Talent is spreading, and teams that were not ranked highly in the past are now having their day.

This season has seen an unsual number of upsets. Pitt is the sixth team to be ranked No. 1 by the wire services — a first. And if Pitt doesn't continue un-defeated through its remaining four games, there will be a seventh top team, possibly an eighth. Clemson and North Carolina were ranked in the

There were only three high scbools playing football in Atlanta and now there are 40 or 50, 1 think. There are certainly more players to go around, and with the 95-30 rule they are spread around."

Las Angeles Times Service OS ANGELES -- It's becoming a big "Then bow come they raised it two dollars a barrel, and cut back deal. A Long Beach restaurateur barters production the day after you per-suaded the Senate to give them the meals for bar mirrors, and a Hollywood dentist trades fillings for furniture. When a Bev-erly Hills realtor recently leased land for an "I'm sorry. I have to come to at-Italian restaurant, he accepted as partial tention. They're playing the 'Star-Spangled Banner.' " down payment $25,000 worth of beer, salads and pizzas.

Thousands of businessmen in California have rediscovered barter - the cashless economy in which services are traded for services, goods for goods. And, as with so many trends and fads, what starts in California soon expands across the United States and eventually into foreign countries.

Barter has been around since the first farmer swapped a cow for a sack of grain, and neighbors have long exchanged power drills for lawn mowers over the backyard fence. But modern barter, which involves small businesses and computerized trade clubs, now is a multimillion-dollar sub-economy nationwide. Barter, say its supporters, has emerged in the last I0 years as a viable alternative to cash.

Jerome Strofs, a dentist, has traded rootcanal work and dental checkups for house painting, a television set and a camera. "Bartering brings me patients to fill the empty spaces in my appointment book," he ex-plains. A trader for a year, Strofs says that barter brings in less than 5 percent of his practice. Nevertheless, he says, "Tm really trading time I would spend reading magazines in my office."

Robert Hazelzet, owner of Mr. Robert's Restaurant in Long Beach, Calif., trades meals for sign painting and coffee supplies, among other things. As a member of two Southern California trade clubs, Hazeizet es-timates he transacts $1,600 worth of business a month through barter. "It gives me extra business I wouldn't otherwise have," he says, "and I can turn it over into goods and services I might not otherwise buy." Michael Ames, head of the Trade American Card, which is based near Los Angeles, agrees: "Barter allows you to increase your business while conserving your cash flow."

Some Principle

The principle is simple: If a shoemaker wants to buy some printing, but is short of cash, he can exchange a $50 pair of shoes for. $50 worth of printing. Because it costs the shoemaker only $30 to make the shoes, he saves $20 while reducing his inventory. Even, after he pays sales tax (in cash) and fees, he comes out ahead, say club owners.

That idea seems to be catching on. Trade clubs -- organizations that facilitate barter exchanges - have doubled in number in the last year to about 300 nation vide, estimates Joseph Weiss, spokesman for the International Association of Trade Exchanges of Washington DC Weiss adde that trade on the barter gansactions in the United States last year amounted to more than $350 million. The oldest and largest of the clubs is the Southern California-based Business Exchange, which is known as BX. It was found-ed 21 years ago by M.J. (Mac) McConnell, a former advertising executive and banker. Although BX lost money for its first nine years, with the advent of computers it has grown into a $35-million business, with 11,000 members in 55 franchises across the country. McConnell, a silver-haired entrepreneur.

sits in his North Hollywood headquarters surrounded by bartered furniture, art works, even an exercise trampoline. Everything down to McConnell's blue suit and silver glasses - resulted from barter.

Barter Credits

He explains the concept behind modern trade clubs: "The limiting factor in traditional barter was finding another person who had what you wanted in an equal dollar amount' To overcome that problem, he says, he drew on his banking experience to devise a system of barter credits. The credits are an artificial money, in the form of bank-like checks (Trade American Card uses a Visa-like credit card) that allow for multiple or unequal swaps. "Say a furniture maker needs shoes, but a shoe dealer doesn't want furniture," but a snoe dealer doesn't want furniture, McConneil goes on. "The shoe store will gladly accept credits in exchange for shoes, and can later apply the credits to take a trip to Hawni or to get groceries or to buy tires." With the credit system, clients of BX can conduct barter exchanges among themselves through a computerized network provided by the club. A merchant in Chicago can deal with one in California, McConnell says. In exchange for the service, BX charges its members an initial fee of $345, annual dues of $100 and an 8 percent "buyer's fee" or commission on all exchanges.

McConnell gestures to a foot-thick stack of computer printouts on his desk, representing a single month's exchanges. The size of an exchange can range from the cost of a pizza to half the price of a $1-million shop-ping mall, says McConnell. Smaller clubs, like Trade American Card, cover a single region and comprise a few hundred members.

Barter clubs are a good deal for small businessmen, who save their large markup in a trade. But mixing cash and barter credits can help out the auto dealer or wholesaler as well, McConnell suggests. Phil Furst, a real-tor in Beverly Hills, has developed his own "creative financing" to help sell property in a tight market. He leased an Italian restaurant in exchange for a combination of cash and credit. In addition, he says, "Some buyers with a limited amount of cash have used barter credit to move into small duplexes."

Barter does have drawbacks, however. Club members can redeem credits only among themselves. Consequently, a trader might be mable to use all of his credits. "BX credit is not quite as good as cash," McCon-nell admits. "You can't move 100 percent of your inventory with it and you can't buy ev-erything with it." For dentist Strofs, "The biggest disadvantage is that you must do research before you buy. You can't just walk down the street; you have to look them up and call them through the BX directory." Additionally, he says, "It's better for services than for goods. It's somewhat inconvenient."

As a result, clients say that they must di-vide their barter transactions between business and personal swaps, often trading for bouse painting, plumbing and dental work instead of wholesale goods.

Another drawback is that barter customers might pay more than they bergained for. "To be honest, " says Albert Lavine, a furniture dealer of North Hollywood, "initially, I found that some dealers were not all that ethical. They might try to exceed the selling price or wouldn't hold to a sale price."

Ames acknowledges that there may be price gougers. He points out that retail trad-ers, whose prices are marked, cannot raise costs for barter. But, he adds, "The contrac-tors must be watched." Ames says that the abuse has waned since his club and others took strong measures to thwart it. Since its founding in 1973, Trade American Card has ousted 200 members for price abuse, Ames reports.

Barter and the IRS

As barter becomes more popular, the In-ternal Revenue Service has begun dealing with trade clubs to work out taxation of barter income. The IRS, contending that millions of dollars a year are lost because of unreported harter income, is suing several clubs to obtain membership records.

Ames argues that in the last three years, the IRS has conducted close andits of traders and found good compliance with tax laws. He asserts that trade-club records of member transactions should remain confidential.

As a compromise, the federation is trying to deal with the IRS to develop a reporting form similar to that used by savings-and-loan customers to report interest income.

BX hopes to expand into international markets in Britain and Australia. McConnell also says he is looking into large corporate trades and consumer barter. To finance his expansion, McConnell recently made BX a public company, trading over the counter. Smaller clubs, like Ames' Trade American Card, are banding together to capture the corporate market nationwide, says Weiss. They would like to bargain with large companies to liquidate surplus inventories through the small clubs. Weiss points to these plans 'as evidence that barter no longer is the "underground economy" it once was.

With trade clubs, we seem to have hit the right formula," he says. "They are popping Princess Marie-Astrid of Luxenbourg and Karl-Christian of Hapsburg-Lorraine, archduke of Austria, whose engagement was announced Monday. Karl-Christian works as a banker in Brussels. The couple, both of whom are 27, will marry Feb. 6.

PEOPLE: Iran Raid Chief Regrets Aborting of Rescue Plan

Retired Army Col. Charles Beck-with, commander of the aborted raid in April, 1980, to free the American hostages in Iran, says only "two or three" people would have been hurt or killed if his mission had not been called off after three of the mission's helicopters developed mechanical problems. Reveloped mechanical proteins. Fight Americans died when a transport plane and a belicopter collided while taking off from the desert 200 miles from Tehran. "After the bostages got back. [we learned] where they all were and their activities, coupled with the security at the embassy. We would have done the job. Absolutely. We just didn't get there," said Beck-with, who now heads Security Assistance Service of Texas Ltd., an anti-terrorist consulting business he started last month.

ter-ton elephant given to him by visiting President Omar Bongo of Gabon. Hearing that nobody had thought of a name for the elephant, Pertini told the director to call her Carla - after his wife.

A British vicar, tired of being jilt-ed at the altar, is demanding cash on the barrelhead from those who want to be married at his church. Rev. Samuel Philpott, who now demands a £17.75 ($33) deposit for would-be brides and grooms, says it's because he's been stood up so many times by couples with sec-ond thoughts.
